Special Notice!

The business of the Jackson Standard, including its stock, fixtures and good will, has this day been sold to the Jackson Standard Company.

All the business of the office up to this date will be settled by J. H. Mackley, and all the business from and after this date, including the collection of unpaid subscriptions, by the purchasers.

THE JACKSON STANDARD CO.,
By R. U. WILSON, Mgr.
JACKSON, O., June 13, 1888.
JACKSON STANDARD-JOURNAL.

About July 25th the Standard and Journal will be consolidated and will thereafter be published as an eight page, six column quarto.

The Standard-Journal will be under the editorial and business management of Messrs. J. M. Lively and Thos. C. Gerken.

It will be Republican in politics, and will do what it can, within the circle of its influence, for the success of its party.

While giving the general news, special attention will be given to home and local affairs, and it will be made the best paper ever published in the county.

Terms:—$1.50 per year in advance. Now is the time to subscribe.

It will be by far the best advertising medium in the county. We are ready to contract for advertising space, and those who first apply will have choice of location.

THE STANDARD-JOURNAL CO.

The Republican party proposes to take Grover Cleveland at his word—one term of the Presidency is enough.

Ninety-three delegates to the Republican National Convention of 1884, were also delegates to the Convention at Chicago last week.

The Republican Convention at Chicago was a tariff Convention. The minister who opened the proceedings prayed for divine protection, and the Republican platform indorsed protection.

President Cleveland, in the interest of Reform, has permitted a bill to become a law that provides for a costly bridge to Red Top, the President's country place. There is a bridge there already but it is not gorgeous enough, therefore the expense of a new one must be incurred.

Mr. J. H. Mackley, who retires from the Jackson Standard, will be missed from the profession. He made the Standard the vehicle of good and wholesome influence, and wielded a forcible, poetic and witty pencil. We trust his future may be pleasant.—Gallipolis Journal.

After the November election those Democrats who have bought bandanas and will then have no further use for them for the purpose for which handkerchiefs are intended, will find them handy to carry small quantities of peaches, beans or potatoes to the country store, and to carry their groceries home from market.

The National Woman Suffrage Association of the United States was represented at the Chicago Convention by Miss Susan B. Anthony, Mrs. Isabella Beecher Stowe, sister of the late Henry Ward Beecher, and Miss Caroline A. Huling, editor of the Justice, the suffrage Journal of Illinois. They were heard by the committee on platform for two hours and pledged their support to the Republican party as long as their votes would be needed if the Republican party would give them the desired recognition.

In the Convention held at Chicago last week, the same desk was used by the presiding officer that was used in the Conventions where Garfield and Blaine were nominated.

A number of gavel were presented to the Convention, one of wood made from the desk used by Gen. Grant when he was in the tannery at Galeana, Illinois. Another is an oak gavel made from the tree under which the Republican party was organized in 1856, at Jackson, Michigan. A third is of silver, surrounded with gold bands, presented by a Chicago firm. The last, presented to the Permanent Chairman of the Convention, was presented by the Mayor of Chicago, and is an elegant affair, twelve inches in length, weighing thirty-three ounces, twenty-five of which are of silver, and eight of gold. The handle is nine inches in length, of solid silver, twisted, at the top of which are two escutcheons of the United States in gold and silver. Above this is the American eagle, bearing on its back the gavel proper, which is of silver, bearing upon it the names of the thirty-eight States of the Union. At each end is a heavy gold plate, upon one of which is a three carat diamond, and at the other end is engraved: "Presented to the National Republican Convention of 1888, by His Honor the Mayor, on behalf of the citizens of Chicago."

HARRISON, MORTON AND VICTORY!

The Republican National Convention, after the most remarkable scenes ever seen enacted in any National Convention, has concluded its labors by the selection of a ticket that insures to the Republican party a return to power in National politics on the 4th of March next. No other Convention ever had such a wealth of candidates from which to choose and under all the circumstances none ever chose more wisely. Indiana, whose vote carried by the Republicans insures success for the Republican party, heads the magnificent political battle that is just being opened by that gallant soldier, that tried statesman, and splendid political fighter, Benjamin Harrison.

Every school boy fresh from his books knows that the name of Harrison has long been an honored one in the history of our country; every young man, that in the battles that have been fought to preserve the Nation and in the legislation to perpetuate it, the name and fame of Harrison is so interwoven, and has so indelibly stamped itself upon the politics and policies of the nation, as to be a part of history itself; and the old men remembering the gallant fight of 1840, wherein "Tippecanoe and Tyler too" swept the country and bore from power a President to whose election to power and whose fall the history of Cleveland will prove an exact parallel, will lend his every energy to bringing about Republican success in the campaign.

As Cleveland is the favorite son of New York, so in 1840 was Van Buren; as Cleveland came to the Presidency from the Governor's chair, so came Van Buren; as Cleveland is backed by money and officials in power, so Van Buren; as Cleveland was tendered a unanimous nomination in the belief that he and he alone can carry his party through to success, so again Van Buren. Yet as certainly as Van Buren went down before gallant old Tippecanoe, the illustrious grandfather of the Republican standard-bearer, so will Cleveland go down this year.

The Democracy might as well make up their minds to go. The echoes of the first battle of the year still linger among the mountains of Oregon; Indiana is wild with enthusiasm over the honor bestowed on her favorite and illustrious son, and when November comes will bury the Democratic ticket under a majority of ten thousand, while the savage attacks on American industries and American labor by the President and his party, will carry New Jersey and Connecticut. In addition to all this, New York has upon the ticket one of her tried and true men in the person of Levi P. Morton.

Against this combination of patriotism, statesmanship and Republicanism, the Democratic combine can not stand. It must go.

The Judicial Convention.

The Republican Convention of the Seventh Judicial District met at Portsmouth on Tuesday, at 10 a. m., at Wilhelm's Opera House. J. P. Purdum, of Portsmouth, was made Temporary Chairman, and W. D. Corn Temporary Secretary. A committee of one from each county was appointed on permanent organization, credentials and resolutions, and an adjournment taken until 2 p. m.

At 2 p. m. Convention re-assembled and the reports of the committees received, the temporary organization being reported for the permanent, which was, at the request of Mr. Corn changed by the substitution of Hon. John W. Gregg, of Pike, for Secretary.

The roll of counties being called for nominations, Jackson County, by J. W. Laird, presented James M. Tripp; Pike County, by Gen. Wells S. Jones, presented W. Dow James; and Vinton County, by Capt. Rannels, presented Homer C. Jones.

The balloting from the first indicated that the nominee was not to have an overwhelming majority of the votes cast, all the candidates being well and favorably known and each having his special claim upon the Convention which the Convention seemed desirous to recognize. Sixteen ballots were taken, on the last James M. Tripp being nominated by the following vote: Tripp, Jackson 15, Lawrence 12-19, Scioto 9, total 36-3-19.

James, Pike 9, Scioto 3, total 12. Jones, Vinton 9, Scioto 5, Lawrence 8-16-19, total 22-16-19.

At the Cornell University Commencement last week the honors were carried off by three Ohio boys, the Ivy oration by C. M. Reynolds, of Dayton, the class prophecy by W. B. Smith, of Columbiana, O., and the closing exercises, the class song written by A. E. Hoyt, of Antwerp, Ohio.

Democratic papers have been raising a holy howl because so many members of the Chicago Convention are connected with rail roads in some capacity. Just in proportion as these Republicans, who have the misfortune to make their living by working for railroads, are successful in knocking Democrats out of time, do the Democrats feel badly about Republicans being railroaders. This bad feeling set in when Judge Thurston, of Nebraska, took charge of the Convention as temporary chairman of the Convention, and will no doubt continue to the end of the campaign.

JACKSON COAL.

Jackson County coal dealers have scored a point, in securing the contract for furnishing to Longview Asylum, Cincinnati, their supply of coal for next year, 100,000 bushels. The

C. M. MARTIN & SONS.

Cincinnati coal dealers have been manifesting a good deal of feeling on the subject, and some of them have been giving out some information on the subject that is not strictly true.

The Times-Star of June 19th contains the following:

The coal men of this city are up in arms against the Directors of the Longview Asylum on account of the letting of the contract for coal for that institution to the Jackson Coal Company, of Jackson, Ohio. This company has contracted for 100,000 bushels, which heretofore has been held by home industry, has gone from us, and the coal men say this should not be thus.

The Longview Directors awarded the contract in secret session, but it has been ascertained that the price was a very small fraction over eight cents a bushel, and that the delivery is to be at the Asylum. Mr. Fechter was seen in reference to the matter and said:

"I am as much in favor of patronizing home industries as anyone could be. But this was purely a matter of business. The Jackson Coal Company's price was at first $3,000 and their last $1,500 less than that of Sol. Kineman, the lowest local bidder. We have to be very economical in our management of the asylum so as to have ends meet. There is no spare money anywhere, and $1,500 is not an item to be overlooked. The objection has been urged that the Jackson coal is not as good even at the less price as the Youngsberry coal. But Dr. Miller, the Superintendent, and members of the Board of Directors examined that carefully and stated that it is undoubtedly a saving to use it when the price is taken into consideration, although the quality is not so good."

Mr. Kreis, another of the Directors, was seen, but refused to have anything to say about the matter. Said he: "The terms of the contract are not complete yet, and it might be damaging to the interests of the asylum to publish the figures."

Said another Director: "I would like to know why the Cincinnati coal men's contract was ten to fifteen percent higher than ever before, while the Board of Public Affairs was able to get coal at twenty cents on the ton less than formerly for the pumping station."

The Erkenbrecher Starch Company has been using the Jackson coal for some time. Mr. Schuler was questioned as to the wherefore of this and replied: "We have made practical tests at the furnaces and know that at the price at which we get it, the Jackson coal is cheaper than the Pittsburgh coal."

"How much cheaper?"
"Well, if we could get the Pittsburgh coal for three-fourths of a cent a bushel more than we pay for the Jackson coal, we would not hesitate about using the former. It would be cheaper. But outside of a cent a bushel difference, the Jackson coal is the cheaper."

Directors more for their money than the Jackson coal men can furnish. Then our local coal men have been treated with indignity in the matter. They have really not been treated with politeness they complain.

The coal to fill this contract is to be furnished by McClintock & Smith, of the Wellston Coal Co. If the Directors of Longview would only admit it, the real reason why they bought Jackson coal is because it is the most economical and the most satisfactory coal in the market to burn. The charge that Jackson coal was submitted to a scientific test at the Cincinnati Water Works, and found hard and stony and dearer than other coals, is not true. The fact is that exactly the contrary is true. Capt. Allen Heger, of Washington, who is largely interested in this county, opened and developed the mine from which the Longview contract is to be filled, in 1873. In September, 1874, he sent a sample car to the Cincinnati Water Works Co., and a scientific test was made at that institution on the 9th day of September, 1874, under the direction of American Warder, engineer.

That test showed that Jackson coal yields 12.88 per cent more heat than the best Pittsburgh Youngsberry, and 20 per cent more heat than either Hocking Valley or Straitsville. If any Cincinnati coal dealer wants the proof for the above, it can be had from the official records of the Cincinnati Water Works of the above date. Tests made by engineers of the Champion Bar and Knife Co., Champion Machine Co., Whitley, Fassler & Kelly, Springfield Fire Department, and a number of other of the Springfield, Ohio, institutions, are to exactly the same effect.

The chief difficulty with Cincinnati people, we apprehend, is, that they are afraid that this contract will be permanently lost to them after Jackson coal is thoroughly tested, as it will be by a year's consumption. During the low water last winter, when it was impossible for manufacturers in the region around Cincinnati to secure river coal, Jackson coal was shipped in to help out in their extremity, and in almost every case as fast as the contracts of the concerns that thus used Jackson coal have expired, they have made new contracts with Jackson county dealers for their supply. A few years ago coal was shipped almost exclusively to Springfield and Dayton. Now it goes to more than a hundred towns in Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, and as far West as Nebraska. As fast as introduced into any market, it becomes the leading coal of the market.

With the amount of capital, energy and talent that is becoming identified with the coal business of the county, inside the next five years Jackson coal will be the best known article of the kind in the United States.
